

God's Self-Adjusting Universe

In a manner of speaking, does not evil punish itself? Has God not set moral laws in motion, by which we sow what we reap? Could it be that the chastisement and correction by God might happen not directly by his hand, but would instead result from the laws He has set in motion? Conversely, would not goodness and love create their own rewards in our hearts? God has created a universe which is to a great extent self-adjusting.
